[Madison Courier.]

The Courier's suggestion of a meeting of the publishers of afternoon papers in Indiana has met with general approval. It has been proposed by the Columbus Democrat and seconded by The Indianapolis News to appoint October 24th as the date for such a meeting.

We cordially cencur in the time mentioned. The Indianapolis News kindly proflers to make the necessary arrangements for the conference. Now that the enterprise is taking shape and substance, the publishers of the afternoon papers of the state should be careful to be present on the 24th inst. The meeting cannot fail to be one of great importance and profit, if only a beginnning is made. Our interests are identical, and it is time that we take steps for organization to promote and extend them.

THE ORIO ELECTION.

A Full Vote being Poiled in Cincinnati-Republicans Gaining in the German

[Special dispatch to The Indianapolis News.] CINCINNATI, October 12 .- At this hour, high noon, only fragmentary reports of the election have been received. These show that a very heavy vote is being polled; that there is very littl pratching on the part of the republicans, an I that in the German wards the republicans are gaining over last year's vote. The day is delightful. [By Telegraph to the Associated Press.] [By Telegraph to the Associated Press.]

CINCINNATI, October 14.—The weather is clear and pleasant, and undoubtedly there will be a large vote polled. Up to noon about the average number had voted. Geo. W. Williams, colored republican nominee for representative, is being erased from the ticket by many republicans. Lawis G. Bernard, democratic candidate for cierk of the common pleas court, is being served in the same manner by many democrats. Little attention is paid to constitutional amendments.

In Avondale it is stated forty democrats voted the straight republican ticket. In the Second ward, also, several hard money democrats scratched Ewing.

also, several new Ewing.
From republican sources, it is claimed that there have been republican gains in the 16th, 14th, 15th, 16th, 17th, 18th, 19th, 20th, 24st, 22d and 23d wards.

Several arrests were made by the police of ticket holders, but they were all released shortly after-

"I have had council with Ignacio, Red Jacket and Maniguiniup, chiefs of the renegade Utes, and 60 other southern Ute Indians. They desire that the great father be informed that they promise they will take no part with nor render any aid to the Wnite River and Mintah Utes. The are contented and desire to remain'at peace. I, to-day, refused to issue them their annuity goods until this day two weeks. To this refusal they consented, saying "All right." The Southern Utes request that when a reply to this report of their action is received, it

E. P. Weber and George Fuhr, two carriers, from General Merritt, arrived at Rawlins yesterday. General Merritt advanced on the White River Agency on the 11th. He found the deadbody of Carl Goldstein, an Israelite, sent with supplies for the Utes, dead in a gulch, six miles from the agency with two bullet wounds in the shoulder. A teamster named Julius Moore, formerly from Bainbridge, Massachusetts, who was with him when he left here, was found about 109 yards from Goldstein with two bullet holes in his bresst, and his body hacked and mutilated with a knife or hatchet.

In an abandoned coal mine the command found the body of an agency employe named Dresser. He had crawled in there to die. In one of his pockets was found a letter from Meeker to Major Thornburg, dated September 29, one o'clock, saying he would meet him on the morrow in company with Chief Douglass.

On entering the agency a scene of great desolation presented itself. All the buildings, excepting one, were burned to the ground, and not a living thing was in sight, except the command. The Indians had taken every thing except flour, and decamped. The women and children were missing, and nothing whatever could be found to indicate what became of them. They either have been murdered and buried or else taken away as hostages. Their dreadful and unmentionable fate calls forth the most profound sympathy. The dead body of Father Meeker, was found about 100 yards from his house lying on his back, shot through the head, the left side of his head mashed in with some blunt instrument, a piece of barrel stave drove in his mouth, and one of his hands and and amms bedly burned. The dead body of W. H. Post, Father Meeker's assistant, was found between the building and the river, with a bullet hole through his left ear and one under the car. He and Father Meeker were stripped entirely naked. Another employe named Eaton, was found dead, stripped naked, and a bundlet of paper bags in his arms. His face was badly eaten by wolves and he had a bullet hole in his left breast. Frank Dresser, a brother of the man found in the coal mine, was found bedily burned. He had, without doubt, been killed instantly, as the bullet had passed through his heart. The bodies of Eaton, Thompson, Price, Eskridge and all other employes not named, were also found. Gen. Merritt buried seven bodies at the agency, including Meekers, and three on the road. The Unta'i Indians alf'joined the Uses before the Thornburg fight.

THE CHIEF OURAY.

[Denver (Col.,) Tribune.]

Ouray, the head chief of the Utes at the Uncompabgre, is an Indian of remarkable ability. He lives in a house, cultivates some sixty acres of ground, has a large flock of sheep, wears the clothing of a white man, rides around in a covered wagon or carriage, and has largely adopted the habits and customs of civilization. He learned to sign his name, and was in the habit of sending letters direct to President Grant stating his grievances and what he wanted. Frequent attempts have been made to assessinate him by the Indians themselves, especially those of hereditary chieftain blood, who are jealous of his power and dissatisfied with his change from the old habits and customs. Many years ago the Sioux captured the son of Ouray, while he was on a buffielo hunt on the eastern plains of Colorado. The boy them was twelve years of age and his only child. It has been Ouray's great grief, and as he

Assignment of the State House Contract,
An instrument was filed in the office of the county recorder this morning by which Kanmachdrand Denig contractors for the erection of the state house, assign and transfer all their rights under that contract, as well as the one to build the East Texas penitentiary, and the contral of all the money now due, and to become due, to Jemes H. Raymond & Co., bankers of Austin, Texas, to secure the payment of $10,000 loaned to the firm to enable them to carry on their contracts. The instrument was executed December 16, 1878. The performance of the contract with the board of state house commissioners, is assured by Columbus R. Cummings and Elias F. Gobel in the sum of $250,000. To secure them it kanemacher & Denig made W. B. Howard their attorney in fact to act for them in all matters pertaining to the execution of the contract, in return for which Howard agreed to advance one-third of the money necessary to carry on the work. In the mortgage to Raymond & Co., Howard is directed to observe all directions of the mortgagees who are empowered to appoint a resident, representative or attorney in fact, to see that the terms of the mortgage are complied with. There is also a complete transfer of all personal property and tools and machinery used in the work, from the contractors to Raymond & Co.

Charged With Personating a Revenue Officer.

The papers in the case of J. A. Linville, an attorney of Ligonier, charged with personating as internal revenue officer, have been received at the office of the United States district attorney. He was examined by Commissioner Harper, of Ft. Wayne, and admitted to bail in the sum of $500 to appear for trial here. A transcript of the evidence shows that he received $255 from John Christman and saveral farmers near there, engaged in makingapple jack, to settle their case with the government. One Swartz, Christman testified, told them the manufacturer of apple jack was against the law, and that there was a revenue man in Ligenier who could fix their cases for them, and when they went there, they met Linville. Linville says he was acting as their attorney only, never claimed to be a revenue agent. R. S. Robertson, of Fort Wayne, says the district attorney told bim, there would be no indictment found on the evidence.

The Hancock County Mound.

Prof. Collett has returned from visiting the Hancock county Indian mound, about 10 miles south of Greenfield, about which there has been considerable excitement since its discovery by archeologists. The Professor reports that the mound is not of artificial but natural origin, examination showing it to be a remnant of the glacial crift. It is 80 feet high and 600 yards long, its peculiar shape seeming to justify the opinion of its being the work of the mound builders. An exextion made at the south end of the mound uncerthed a number of Indian skeletons, some standing, others in a sitting posture. A quantity of stone axes, filints, striped stones, totums and fragments of pottery were also found in the neighborhood of the excavation.

Wheat has again astonished the dealers. From $1.20 bid on yesterday the price jumped to $1.2634 saked, and only $1.26 bid, but the market is in reality one cent' higher. It could easily be sold at $1.26 and might even bring $1.27. This season has been one of the most surprising ever known in the wheat market. The Baltimore market to-day skipped to $1.43½ bid for December delivery. The long expected break does not seem to materialize with any great amount of celerity. It is now prophecied by some of the more reckless dealers that wheat will reach $1.40 in this city before next spring.

THE first week of October saw $143,810 daddy dollars go into the the treasury, which is at the rate of one-quarter more than the minimum monthly coinage Since the passage of the silver bill, there have been coined $42,757,750, which is five times more than all coined during the eighty-one years since 1792, when the first United States coinage act was passed. The treasury now holds $31,202,680 of these eighty-odd cent pieces purporting to be dollars, and the hold $11,054,070 of them. How long this glut is to go on unhindered, at present there seems no means of telling. Politicians and platforms of both parties have fought shy of saying anything but nauseous praise based on the assumption that those pieces were dollars. Each has been pleading that Codlin was the friend, not Short, and in proof of it pointed to the "dollars" piling up. Sooner or later the party in power will be confronted with the blunt question of what shall be done with those millions of undervalue pieces of silver, and with that other question, how long shall the United States pay its notes (evidences of debt) at one counter and hand them out at another?

THE Lafayette Dispatch thinks The News should re-examine the McCabe-Orth question and reverse its opinion. The News is always ready to give its best consideration to facts, even if they should compel it to alter its opinions. But we can learn of no new facts in this matter. The Dispatch says McCabe found between seventy and eighty fraudulent votes in Montgomery county, but "the number was not sufficient"-Orth's declared majority being ninety-eight. Now, will the Dispatch us if these votes were not decided to be legal, in a contest for a county effice in which McCabe was attorney. It has always our understanding that the Montgomery county votes were declared not fraudulent, and therefore, Mr. McCabe abandoned all that he subsequently discovered two hundred fraudulent votes for Orth Tippecanoe county, but had not time to take evidence in the time fixed by law, and therefore petitioned congress for an extension. It is very singular that when every nook and cranny was searched for evidences of fraud, that two hundred illegal votes in the Dispatch's own town and county were unnoticed. Did any body hear of them until after the legal limit had expired, and did Mr. McCabe ask for more time until several months after the time had expired. Does it not look if this excuse was an after-thought; as if he had been urged by his friends to make a show of contest with the assurance that his party would give him the seat in order to make the Indiana delegation democratic. Mr. Springer, chairman of the committee on elections, frankly says the law does not permit extensions, but he thinks it is only directory, and the house will do it anyhow. Does this not indicate an intention to seat McCabe in spite of law and right. We can see it in no other light. The case seems simple enough. The democrats want that seat and they intend to have it.

An Irish Insurrection. "Anti-landlordism" in Ireland is assuming serious proportions. The curse of 'rents' is coming home to roost. The present condition is not a new one. It is simply a fresh manifestation of an old trouble. To properly gauge it, it must be borne in mind that the Irish people have never acquiesced in the "settlements" imposed upon them by the English arms. Under the old clan government the people owned the land and the chiefs had no right to seize or sequestrate any part of it. When conquered these people, with all the ferocious tenacity of the Celt, clung to their ancient rights, voluntarily submitting to no foreign customs, laws or rule. The Irishman has never ceased to look upon the Englishmen as intruders, to hold the landlord as a land-pirate backed by force and arms, in the enjoyment of things to which he had no right but the right of possession. It is this that has made the social condition of Ireland one long tumult and broil, and explains the fierceness and bitterness shown in America by the Catholic Irish for the Orangemen. It is, beside, the antagonistic feeling of religion, the feeling that Orangemen represent the conquerors and conquest of Ireland by an alien people.

When William, of Orange, completed his conquest, the confiscations which followed were not consummated by the appearance in person of the new landlords to take possession. There was not much satisfaction in a man's going to his domains to be shot for his pains, and such were the effective measures usually taken by the rapparees. But out of this state of affairs came in time a compromise by which the English landlords who had received Irish possessions at the hands of the government were allowed a rent charge upon the estates and as time rolled on and the situation was solidified by the force which the law gave, the ancient owners sank to the position of tenants at will, and the landlords had practically almost limitless power over their Irish possessions whenever it came to be a question between them and the natives. Even in this day and generation the strongest and perhaps practically in great measure, the only restraint upon the actions of the Irish landlords is the fear of assassination. Readers of The News will remember the death of the earl of Leitrim by a bullet from behind a bush, a few months ago, and the revelation it was to some of them to learn that this earl exercised not merely absolute rights over material possessions in the most tyrannical way, but treated the virtue of the Irish women and the simplest rights of the men as fair game for his unbridled

The smouldering opposition against the whole system of landlordism found no one of influence strong enough to fan it into life until Michael Davitt, returning from this country with his imagination aflame from the freedom here, advised the people of Mayo to refuse the payment of rackrents, (an annual rent raised to the utmost, or to the full annual value of the premises, or near it,) and to proclaim the right of the people to the soil. The Home rulers didn't dare deal with the question and so ignored it, like so many of our own public men of the present on the financial questions. But later Charles Stuart Parnell, who has been called the stormy petrel of contemporary Irish politics, has thrown himself into the anti-rent agitation, which for a time since Davitt's declarations languished for lack of leaders, and the result is the beginning of the movement so widespread and earnest, or fierce, that it is likely the British govern ment will have no graver question to deal with, although there is the Afghan war and agricultural distress to aid in making the times troublous. A letter from Dublin desire.

On nearly all large estates the tenants assembled in a body and marched to the landlord's or agent's house, having selected one of their number as spokesman, In every case they complained that the rents were too high, and demanded a reduction of from twenty-five to thirty per cent, at the same twenty-five to thirty per cent., at the same time informing the landlords that if they would not accept the amount offered they would get none at all. In reply to threats of eviction the tenants in several cases defiantly answered that they did not mean to be evicted, and that they would hold their farms evicted, and that they would hold their farms by force.

These threats, combined with the intimidation practiced by small groups of armed men, who recalled unpleasant memories of the Whiteboy days, had in most cases a salutary influence on the landowners, and the tenants' terms were accepted. In a few estates, situated in Mayo, and belonging to absentees, who feel themselves out of danger, the old rents were insisted on, but the tenants have persistently refused so pay. Notices to quit have been threatened, but few bailiffs are found willing to run the risk of serving them. Evidences of a defiant few ballins are found willing to run the risk of serving them. Evidences of a defiant temper among the farming classes are encountered in every direction, and there can be little doubt that should the landowners in the coming winter attempt to enforce claims which the peasants consider unjust, there will be an outburst of the social war which will recall the days when the Ribbon ladges scattered death through the landlorder. ideas of contesting. The Dispatch says of Tipperary.

A Russian aeronaut recently had a narrow escape from the bewildered inhabitants of a village on the Don. He had made an ascent from Rostow, and was about to alight when he saw a crowd collected below, and several shots were fired at him. What Our Indian Policy Should Be.

[Letter of Gen. Crook to Secretary McCrary.] [Letter of Gen. Crook to Secretary McCrary.]

The true and only policy to pursue with the Indian is to treat him just as one should a white man. If he makes war on our frontier settlement, punish him; but if he has been reduced to submission, protect him in life and property. Keep white thieves every sack of grain, and my word for it he for every pound of beef and every hide and every sack of grain, and my word for it he will make rapid advances. Self interest will impel him to imitate us, to send his children to school, to adopt clothing, perhaps our language, and to devote his attention to the raising of cattle and horses, and eventually to qualify himself for citizenship.

glory; but it don't follow that the country must be tied up in a rag and presented to him as a testimonial of our affectionate help-the opposite of the Chinaman. The latter is frugal even to abstemiousness, and economical to the verge of penuriousness. The former will frequently, at feasts and dances, give away the bulk of his possessions to needy friends and relatives. We must endeavor to correct this defect in the Indian's character. As affairs are now managed he has no en-couragement to save. When his horses and cattle are big enough to be of service they are driven off in herds by white renegades. When his wheat and corn and vegetables are almost ready for market his reservation is changed, and sometimes, as in the case of the Poncas, he is compelled to abandon everything. Were we to treat some of our foreig emigrants in such a manner it would not take long to turn them into prowling vagabonds, living by robbery and assassination.

A BUSINESS PROJECT. Will Indianapolis Start It?—A Suggestion

Worthy the Consideration of Those Whom it Concerns.

Whom it Concerns.

The notion of inviting dealers from the regions where Indianapolis has a market and from those regions where she hasn't, but ought to have, to come to this city and inspect the wholesale stocks, at the expense of those who would be benefitted by sales made, is one which Indianapolis wholesale dealers should consider and show to themselves good cause before they reject it. Latayetts tried it a month ago and the experiment turned out such a marked success that in the words of one Lafayette merchant, "We would do it every month if we could" What they did was briefly this: The wholesale merchants of the place made out lists of customers they wanted and of those they wanted to make customers, and contributed proportionately to a common fund which was expended in procuring from the railroads centering there, tiekets which were honored on presentation and afterward sent to the merchant's committee there, tickets which were honored on presentation and afterward sent to the merchast's committee where they were prid.

The dealers through the state and elsewhere whe were presented with these passes, which were good for three or four days, were invited to use them in coming to Lafayette, where, upon presentation, they were furnished with hotel passes good for a dinner, supper and lodging of the certain day fixed upon, and for breakfast next morning. They were also furnished theater tickets for the evening. During the day the Lafayette wholesale dealers showed thoir stocks and made their sales. One boot and shoe firm said, "We contributed $100 and we got it back ten times over. We sold more goods on that one day than we have sold during any two weeks we have been in business."

we got it back ten times over. We sold more goods on that one day than we have sold during any two weeks we have been in business."

Not merely were old customers brought to the market, but new ones. Dealers who were "good" down in the southern part of the state were sent invitations and passes, and many came and much money that theretofore had gone to Cincinnati went to Lafayette, and new trade started for the city on the Wabash. In the face of this success a similar consideration of an attempt on the part of Indianapolis should not be dismissed lightly. This primarily concerns the wholesale men of the city and the manufacturers, and on them the expense would have to rest. But if one is to judge by Lafayette it will be money in their pockets.

Now is the time to do this if it is to be done. This week or next, at the farthest, the day snould be fixed. The arrangements are few and simple. A meeting of the merchauts could be held on a few hours notice and The News tenders its columns for the call. Each firm could show the list of dealers it wants invited. Special rates could doubtlers be procured from the railroads and hotels, and an estimate closely approximating the real cost could be made. The modus operandi would then be as follows:

Say Wednesday were fixed as the day. The could be made. The modus operand would then be as follows:

Say Wednesday were fixed as the day. The railroad passes sent out would read that the said pass would be good on Weinesday to Indianapolis and return any time till Saturday. Not all of the invitations would be accepted and hence not all of the passes used, but as the merchants would only have to pay such as were used and presented by the railroad companies, not a single one would get away. Every pass paid for the railroad companies, not a single one would get away. Every pass paid for would be evidence that one man had come to Indianapolis. Then tickets for dinner, supper and lodging on Wednesday, and breakfast Thursday merning at the various hotels would be given, and likewise only such as were used would be paid for. Wednesday could be devoted to selling goods. Wednesday night theater passes, good either at the Park or the Opera house, could be given each one as that good either at the Park or the Opera house, could be given each one, so that after having fed him and "sold" him the merchants would anuse the rural dealer; and as any one who went to one place of anusement could not go to the other, nothing would be lost by giving him his choice. After breakfasting him the next morning the duties of the merchant would end, and such customers as chose to stay till Saturday, during which time their return railroad tickets would be good, would do so at their own expense.

A MURDERER'S SKULL.

Phrenological Description of Wm. M. Merrick from the Measurement of His Skull,

Through the courtesy of Drs. Comingor and Marsee, the writer was permitted to-day to inspect and measure the skull of Merrick, the poisoner of his wife. The skull indicates, a decidedly small head. The cranium, without the hair and intega-Marsee, the writer was permitted to-day to inspect and measure the skull of Merrick, the poisoner of his wife. The skull indicates a decidedly small head. The cranium, without the hair and integuments, now measures nineteen inches and a half, and making full allowance for the above, the head during life could not have been more than twenty-one inches in circumference. This is nearly an inch below the average size. The temperament of Merrick was that known as bilous. He had dark hair, and a strong perceptive region of the intellectual faculties. Besides the smallness of the brain, the proportions are unfortunate and indicate a dangerous combination. While the animal propensities are large, the moral sentiments are not even respectable in size, and the higher intellectual faculties are below the medium. In fact the whole region from which selfishness and ferocity emanate, preponderates. Combativeness, destructiveness, firmness, self-esteem and approbativeness are all large, and would produce, under varying circumstances, a proud and wilful disregard of others, a determination not to be governed or defeated in a purpose, and the secret resolve to conquer either by fair or foul means. Such a combination as the above could cherish revenge till doomsday. In addition to the foregoing we find large secretiveness and moderate conscientiousness, and large amativeness, with moderate benevolence. With such an amalgamation we should expect almost an utifer lack of principle of any kind, but a depth of concealment too profound for ordinary acuteness to penetrate. We could predict plausibility and a show of politicness, with a lecherous and covert intent. Hypocrisy must have been a bosom companion to such an individual. There appears to have be none redeeming feature, and that is the organ of friendship could hardly be called sincere. The general aspect of this head and its lack of symmetry lead us to conclude that its owner must have become victous when quite young. Acquisitiveness being a large organ, the probability is tha but the blemish may be overlooked as it was more than atoned for in her subsequent appearances. J. C. McCollom as "Master Walter" has no superior. The artistic merit of his performance was all that so excellent a Julia could require. The "Str Thomas Clifford" of W. A. Power was fair, but lacking in force. The "Master Wilford" of Mr. Schmitt was a very creditable piece of acting. This evening the new comedy of "Mephistopheles in Petiticoats" will begin, with Miss Charlotte Thompson as Periana, and Mrs. D. P. Bowers as Donna Diana.

"Our candidate," a satire on American politica, and not much overdrawn, was played to a good house at the Fark last night. The best character in it is "Josephus Grimwig," personated by Harry Richmond in a decidedly original and mirth-provoking manner. He is forced into politics and almost into matrimony twice, in spite of himself, takes part in the canvass and the election from which he emerges with a black eye and much the worse for liquor but triumphantly elected. Mr. Von Boyle, as the Chinaman is first rate, and plays the character with zest. In the final scene he is tossed nearly ont of sight in a blanket. Miss Florence Stover made a beautiful and acceptable Lillian. The rest of the characters were all well taken, and the play as a whole was very amusing, and was received with great applause. It will be repeated tonight. THE PARK THEATER. THE MANNERCHOR CONCEPT.

The program for the Mænnerchor concert to-night is a first rate one. The Remenyi troupe take prominent part, supported by the full force of the society. Miss Wolfert and Messrs. Ora Pearson and Bennerscheidt take solo parts.

The Supreme Court.

The following cases were decided in the supreme court Monday, October 14: PARTNERSHIPS - PROMMISSORY NOTES - FRAUD-NEGLIGENCE-PLEADING.

PARTNERSHIPS — PROMMISSORY NOTES — FRAUD—

REGLIGENCE—PLEADING.

6,378. Ewald Over vs. Benjamin F. Hetherington; Marion S. C.; Howk, J.

Where a partner, who is indebted to the firm of which he is a member, sells his interest to a copertner, taking the purchaser's notes for the purchase money. In an action on the notes by such partner against the purchaser, the sale does not, in the absence of fraud or of a warranty as to the interests of such partner, transfer his debt to the firm, as a part of its assets, to the said purchaser, and such debt will not constitute either a set off or counter claim in favor of the purchaser in such action. [52 Ind. 252.] For the interest of a partner in the partnership property is his share of what is left after the payment of the debts of the firm, and after the deduction therefrom of his indebtedness to the firm In the ascertament of his interest his indebtedness to the firm does not be firm and a fer the deduction therefrom the firm and after the payment of the debts of the firm, and after the deduction therefrom the indebtedness to the firm from the purchasing partner, the facts constituting such fraud must be alleged. [80] Ind. 214, Id. 342; 34 Ind. 18; 24 Ind. 565.] Where the books of the firm are open to the examination of the purchasing partner, which will be assumed in the absence of an averment to the contrary, then the alleged ignorance of such purchasing partner of the returning partner's indebtedness to the firm is the result of his own inexcusable negligence, and constitutes no defence to a suit on the notes executed to such retiring partner for his interest.

CHANGE OF JUDGE. CHANGE OF JUDGE.

S,072. Americus Duggins vs. the state; Harrison C. C.; reversed; Worden, C. J.

The appellant was indicted in the court below for murder. The indictment was found while Thomas C. Slaughter was judge of the court. At the September term, 1878, on account of Judge Slaughter's sickness, Wm. A. Porter was appointed to hold the residue of the term, and this case was continued until the next term. Judge Slaughter still being sick, Wm. Porter was again appointed to hold that term. At that term the appellant was granted a change of venue from Judge Porter on an affidavit charging prejudice, and he entered into a recognizance for his appearance at the next term of the court. At the term of court when the change of venue was granted no further notice was taken of the case, and no appointment of a judge made. At the next term George W. Denbo presided, he having succeeded Judge Slaughter in the office of judge of the circuit, the latter having died. A trial was had but the jury did not, agree. Before the second trial a motion was made for change of judge on account of bias and prejudice; but the motion was overruled on the ground that the defendant had had one change of judge on the same ground. Held, the motion for a change of judge should have been sustained. The appellant has not had a charge of judge on the ground of bias and prejudice, PLEADING—PRACTICE—WAIVER—SPECIAL VER—DICT—VENNIRE DE NOVO.

DICT—VENNIRE DE NOVO.

6,860. Wm. M. Locke et. al. vs. Merchants' National Bank of Toledo, Ohio; Hamilton C. C.; reversed; Perkins, J.

(1) Where there are defects in a pleading which, at common law, could only be reached by special demurrer, such defects must, under the code, be reached by motion. [62 Ind., 41] (2) Where a pleading is not founded upon a written instrument, the making a ropy of such instrument on exhibit, does not make it a part of such pleading. [63 Ind., 441.] (3) It is a harmless error to sustain a demurrer to a paragraph of answer, when the facts well pleaded therein may be given in evidence under other paragraphs of the answer, [62 Ind., 390.] (4) In this state going to trial without an issue is a waiver, and a defendant is not entitled to judgment in his favor on the pleadings because the plaintiff has failed to deny material facts pleaded in certain paragraphs of answer. (5) The facts involved in the finding of a special verdict, are of two classes: evidentiary facts and inferential facts. It is the duty of the jury to consider the evidentiary facts, but to find the inferential facts. If the special werdict shows upon its face that the jury found the evidentiary, but not the inferential facts, the verdict is ill, because it shows that the jury ought to have found the inferential facts. [1 Wils., R., 48.] The jury should not find the evidence, but the inferential facts. And in a sult to recover damages against a bank for failing to give due notice of the dishonor of a note, whereby the plaintiff was injured, if the jury do not, in their special verdict, find as to the question of due notice given or otherwise nor facis from which the court can pass upon 6,360. Wm. M. Locke et. al. vs. Merchants' Najured, if the jury do not, in their special verdict, find as to the question of due notice given or otherwise nor fac's from which the court can pass upon such quest'on as a matter of law, the special verdict is not sufficient to enable the court to render judgment upon it, and a vennie de novo should, upon motion, be issued. [60 Ind., 153.] (6) A note 'payable at Citz. bank, Noblesville, Ind., 'means at the 'Citizen's bank, 'at that place, and is commercial paper. [16 Ind., 410; 45 Ind., 122.]

Opening of the Hospital for Female Insane.

Interesting Sketch of the Legislation Authorizing its Erection-Something About the Building and its Officers.

The new hospital for female insane will be thrown open to the public to-morrow afternoon, and in the evening will be formally turned over to the control of the trustees. Ex-Governor Hendricks will preside, and make the opening address. Dr. O. Everts will follow with an historical address; Governor Williams will present the keys to John Fishback, president of the benevolent institution boards, after which there may be remarks from Drs. P. H. Jameson, J. C. Rogers and others, For this occasion 1,500 invitations have been issued. At this time a brief resume of the history of the building and additions to the original hospital will be of interest.

For sixteen years before the legislature made the ppropriation for the new building, there was a ppropriation for the new building, there was a constant and ever increasing demand upon the flieers for additional room, and the annual reports of the governor and legislature echoed these denands, with requests for appropriations te enable the managers to carry their recommendations into flect. The law provided for the dismissal of hrenic cases, and a compliance with its terms stentimes worked hardship and grievous orrow. Several cases occurred where ischarged patients, who are always destructive nd sometimes homicidal, murdered friends or lettives. At different times something was done nd sometimes homicidal, murdered frieuds of elatives. At different times something was done o add to the capacity of the institution. In 1861 r 1862, under the superintendency of Dr. J. H. Woodburn, some of the wards were remodelles

Woodburn, some of the wards were remodelled and added to, increasing the accommodations to the extent of about twenty patients. In 1855 an appropriation of $159,000 was made to complete the north wing. Included in this was a previous appropriation of $35,000, maie for the benefit of incurable insane. Work was at once begun, and finished in 1859. By the completion of this north wing the outline plan of the original building was completed. The capacity was doubled, affording accommodations, as the building was then crowded, for 525 patients, although not more than 450 or 475 should have been cared for. There was no architect for this building; it was constructed under the supervision of Messrs, Wallace and Jameson of the board of trustees.

of Messrs, Wallace and Jameson of the board of trustess.

After this part of the building had been completed it gave to the whole a lop-sided appearance, the original plan having been enlarged upon. So, in 1870, arradditional $80,000 was secured from the legislature to 'tone up' 'the south wing. The old basement was remodeled into wards, the foundation renewed, and an additional story put on all that part between the towers. As the building had been crowded theretofore, the capacity would have been 650 or '700 pattents, but Dr. Everts refused to permit it to be so taxed, and only '620 patients were admitted.

The condition of things remained thus till 1873, the demand for more room coming up always. At that time two scnemes for the improvement of the condition of the insane were presented to the legislature. One contemplated the erection of an institution on the grounds of the hospital west of the city capable of accommodating 600 patients; the other was to build two hospitals, having each a capacity of 300—one in the north part of the state, the other south. Gov. Baker recommended the latter, and it was warmly supported in the house of representatives by D. C. Branham, of Madison, chairman of the committee on benevolent institutions and a member of the committee on ways and means. and of the committee on ways and mean senator Beardsley, of Elkhart, led the hosts a aver of the central institution. A bill providin or that passed the senate and went to the hous senator Beardsley, of Ekhart, led the hosts in favor of the central institution. A bill providing for that passed the senate and went to the house, where about two weeks before the session ended, it was brought to a vote, and while receiving a majority of the votes cast, failed for want of a constitutional majority. No further progress was made till the last Saturday night of the session. Drs. Jameson and Evarts, who were deeply interested in the passage of the bill, the latter being author of its provisions, labored earnestly with the members to secure votes. They received assurances from a majority that, rather than have no provision made for the insane, they would vote for the senate bill. Nothing was required then but to call it up and have the roll called. Dr. Furnas, of Danville, was chosen champion of the measure, the Marion county members deeming it best for them to keep quiet so as not to arouse any of the latent antagonism to Indianapolis. It was ten minutes of 12 before Speaker Edwards recognized Dr. Furnas, and he could call up the bill. The roll call began, and the votes were all going one way. When his name was called, Mr. Branham made a short speech against the measure, charging that Indianapolis wanted everything, that seven-tents of the state revenue was disbursed in this city now, and closed by recommending that the name Indiana be abandoned, and Indianapolis substituted. This hat no effect however, upon the roll-call, and a hurried consultation was had by Mr. Branham with the speaker. The result was an announcement that the committee on ways and means would retire for consultation. Mr. Branham field out, and the other members followed. The clerk was about to proceed with the call, when Speaker Edwards said no further call could be had till the committee returned. And for two years later, in 1875, matters were greatly changed. Gov. Hendricks recommended the building of a central institution; the house was in favor of it, but the senate did not muster a constitutional majority. Mr. Branham had the separation of the sexes and economical administration.

To Dr. Everts, much, if not most of the credit of securing the location of the building is due. The bill that passed authorizing its erection is almost identical with that prepared by him in 1873, and he was also its author, and the plan of the building was furnished by him to the committee on benevolent institutions two years before and subsequently adopted by the board of trustees before an architect was employed. The details and some changes in the roof were worked out by Mr. May. The building is of a peculiar shape, being like two flight of steps set on end and joining in the center. The extreme length is 1,040 feet, but the corridors, following the angles of the building are 1,800 feet long. It is of an average width of 60 feet, surmounted by towers at the angles. It contains 3,600,000 cubic feet; Solomon's 'temple might be hid away six times in its ample dimensions, 'and there still be left room enough to contain Spurgeon's, Beecher's or Talmage's tabernacle.

The building is not altogether fireproof, but as nearly so as the materials will allow. It is substantially and honestly built, a credit to the state and all connected with its construction. The extofficion members of the provisional board did all the work without extra charge to the state. Up to the present time $880,000 have been expended on it including $60,000 for heating apparatus, and it will require $20,000 more to complete it. The original estimate of cost was $700,000. It will accommodate 700 inmates, although 900 or 1,000 may be crowded into it.

Dr. Rogers will have the general superintenden

700 inmates, although 900 or 1,000 may be crowded into it.

Dr. Rogers will have the general superintenden cy of both; buildings, retaining his office and quarters at the old hospital. Drs. J. C. Walker and J. M. Smith will have charse of the new building, Drs. A. J. Thomas and W. H. Hubbara remaining with the superintendent. Dr. Stephens will be apothecary in the old building, and J. H. Tibbets in the new one. Mrs. Harriet Holcomb will be housekeeper, and M. L. Stansbury book and store keeper. Charles Crowley. will assist at the new hospital, and James M. Myers at the old. The force of employers at the new building will number seventy. It is not the intention to remove any of the patients to their new quarters before next week.

Quinine Demoralized.

Quinine Demoralized.

The shivering rumor encountered a News reporter that quinine had had another shake. He found, on inquiry of a wholesale drugsist, that the anti-malarial staple is now quoted at $2.90 in the New York market, the imported article being ten cents lower. "Those free trade fellows in New York are chucking over this decline. Why? For this reason: Say I have to buy $15,000 worth of quinine. It used to be that Powers & Weightman carried the quinine for us, and it didn't matter whether it went up or down, we always made five cents per ounce profit. They will not carry this stock for any one now. I cannot, nor can any one, afford to lay out so much money for so slight a profit. These New York speculators know that dealers will be alraid to invest in quinine, and they hope to make a great amount of money by cornering it. They see that in the spring all the orders for quinine will come on at once. Then they'll put up the price. I will not be surprised to see it go up to $5 or even $10 an ounce. Powers & Weightman would not control the market now if they could. The present depression is because there is no demand. Wait till the demand does come and away the price will go. French quinine now costs $2.87% in New York to import, and is selling at $2.80. You mark my prediction, some of the doctors and legislators who interested themselves to take the tax off quinine will be sick of what they have done before long."

before long."

It will be remembered that this is the sort of prediction that has been made right along ever since the duty was taken off, yet quinine has steadily gone down in price. Better See the Procession First.

Better See the Procession First.

The authorities of the female reformatory telegraphed to the mother of one of the typhoid fever patients the week before the state fair that if she wanted to see her daughter alive she must come immediately. Mother wrote in answer that she could not possibly come till fair week. Thursday afternoon the mother made her appearance at the reformatory and inquired after her daughter's health. The superintendent replied that she was yet alive, but asked: "When did you come to town?" "Oh, I come this morning, but I allowed I'd better see the procession lor comin' to see the child."

selves, and all pleaded guilty to assault and battery.

Moritz Kaufman, a butcher, residing at 307 North West street, was arrested this morning by Patrolman Thornton, on a serious charge. Eliza Still, who lives on Baltimore avenue, four miles east of the court-house, made complaint against him for drawing a revolver on her, last Friday, when she refused to submit to a demand to gratify his pasions. The case will be tried to-morrow.

This morning a colored boy, Johnny Rivers, snatched a pocket-book from Martha McCutcheon, on Vermont street, between Alabama and New Jersey. After a long chase, Roney and Robinson arrested the little thief.

A Clothing Incident.

At half past 9 o'clock this morning a young man from the country might have been seen coming up Illinois street from the Union depot. In fact he was seen. The sidewalk solicitor of D. Frey, who keeps a clothing house at No. 141 on that thoroughare, saw him. Noting this young man's needs, in tones of seductive sweetness he proposed to supply his deficiencies of vestment at a very low figure. The solicitor of the rival house of A. Kabn, No. 135, also had his eye upon the stranger. He, toe, would fain take him in, and accosting him in most mellifuous terms vaunted the merits of his raiment. The proprietors of the two houses drew near and then —. Nobody can tell how it happened, so mobody can tell how trouble grows out of a dog fight. No one was hurt, though the contestants were considerably scratched and their garments soiled by rude contact with the pavement. When it was all over the mertifying discovery was made that the young ruralist had escaped. The two clerks and one of the proprietors were then taken to the mayor's court and, on pleas of guilty were liberally fined and costed.

MILLINERY OPENING.

Woodbridge's Millinery opening is on to-day and to-morrow, including evenings. It is not by way of advertisement, but simple truth, to note the extraordinary richness of the display of trimmed hats and trimming materials. How large an interest such an occasion furnishes is attested by the stream of comers and goers. Some hint of what there is to see, in the absence of time and space for description, may be gathered by saying that there are from fifty to one hundred pattern hats and bonnets, adorning the figures, in all shades and colors, each striving against all the rest for popular favor, and no two resembling. Much enterprise as well as taste is manifested by the proprietor in this exposition of shapes.

TELEPHONE. Mr. Frank H. Smith, job printer, 16½ East Washington street, will shortly issue a Telephonic Directory (to consist of 5,000 copies) for the Bell Telephone company of this city, which will contain many points of information and interest, and will circulate in this city and the principal towns adjacent. Mr. S. C. Soulles has charge of the advertising columns, and will call upon our business men in connection therewith.
